Germ Acid
... THE CAUSE OF DECAY

Germ Acid forms in every mouth at the Danger Line—where teeth meet gums. It comes from decaying food particles hidden beyond reach of the toothbrush. It brings decay and gum troubles. But you can counteract this harmful acid by using Squibb Dental Cream—as it contains Squibb Milk of Magnesia, a safe antacid. It protects and preserves teeth as it cleans them. Fight Germ Acid safely—scientifically—with Squibb Dental Cream.

The prescription
—as before....

Once you have experienced the tonic effect of a large White Horse Whisky, with cold soda, you will realise, as so many others do, the usefulness of this prescription against weariness and loss of appetite.

The restorative powers of White Horse at the end of a tiring day and its value as an aid to digestion are among the chief virtues of this consistently excellent old whisky.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Hollywood Stars Become White Collared Workers.

Kay Strozz

Hollywood.—Everybody these days is boldly venturing into the "white collared class." But such individuality about the white collars they are wearing!

Kay Strozz wears an adapted Lord Byron collar that is particularly becoming to her oval face. With a lounging suit that has a very dark, glowing green bell-hop jacket, she wears a white satin blouse with this cut to its collar. With it she knots a four-in-hand tie.

Joan Crawford gets the most unusual and individual white collar touches of any star. Lunching at the M-G-M commissary with Gary Cooper and Howard Hawks, Joan wore a sports dress, topped by a white box sports coat and an white-taffeta scarf tie about her neck.

Joan Bennett is more apt to button her white collars in the back, in ministerial manner which gives her a demure look. On a black one-piece daytime dress she has double round collar and deep double cups of crisp white crinkled organdie.

Ann Harding's white collars have a way of being rolls of crinkly crepe, used with black or some other colour, or perhaps a white collar inside a high-front, high-back but wide-on-the-shoulders neckline.

Myrna Loy wears a double-decker, fresh looking white plaque collar and double-decker pique cuffs on a hand-knitted blue sports dress, with white pique bow on her blue hat.

NEW PARIS HATS.

Latest Creations Interesting.

The new hats are extremely interesting. The felt cap of Russian inspiration, often with braided felt edges, is liked. This kind of hat is worn on the back of the head, but its edge should make an oval line on the forehead, coming down round the face as hair did in the 'forties and 'fifties. The hats of braided strips which look like wigs, complete with a little chignon in the back, are immensely becoming to girls with retroussé noses.

Many of the new hats are showing a long profile line, some of them with saucy bows in the back, sticking up in the air. I must say they look rather funny, and suggest nothing so much as the silhouette of a hen. Little toques in bright grass-green feathers and fitting closely to the head, look smart with green tailor-made costumes. And the other day I saw a turban of peacock feathers with two peacock feathers jutting straight out in the back. This was worn with a black frock, and it certainly looked smart.

TIGHT STOPPERS

If you have a bottle of perfumery or cream that you can't open—even after putting it under the hot water faucet for a few minutes—try this. Light a match and apply the light all around the edge of the stopper. Most bottles are sealed with paraffin and this melts it, loosening the stopper so it can be removed easily.

INTERESTING ACCESSORIES.

(From A Paris Correspondent)

Belts of gros-grain or of silvered kid, belt-and-bag ensembles and flowered dog-collars make costume incidentals as novel as the frocks themselves are plain.

Belt and bag ensembles are one of the favourite novelties. A bag of white kid, trimmed with applique bands of black leather, has, for instance, an accompanying white leather belt clasped with a black gunmetal button, this to be worn with a black crepe frock and a white felt hat.

Another belt and bag ensemble is made of green suede, trimmed with white imitation ivory and worn with a green frock.

Gloves are short, plain, or gauntleted, and made of a wider range of fabrics than ever before. The new spring gloves in linen with suede palms and fingers are interesting, and white pique gauntlets with voile hands, crocheted cotton, and heavy knitted silk slippers are all newer notes in the glove category than kid or suede models.

Many youthful Buster Brown collars are seen, and little capes and evening jackets of black and aquamarine sequins worked on black tulle are the latest thing—these to be worn with bare-back dresses.

The French girls hate rouge for the day-time, but they like every kind of make-up for evening. And pink finger-nails are beloved by them.

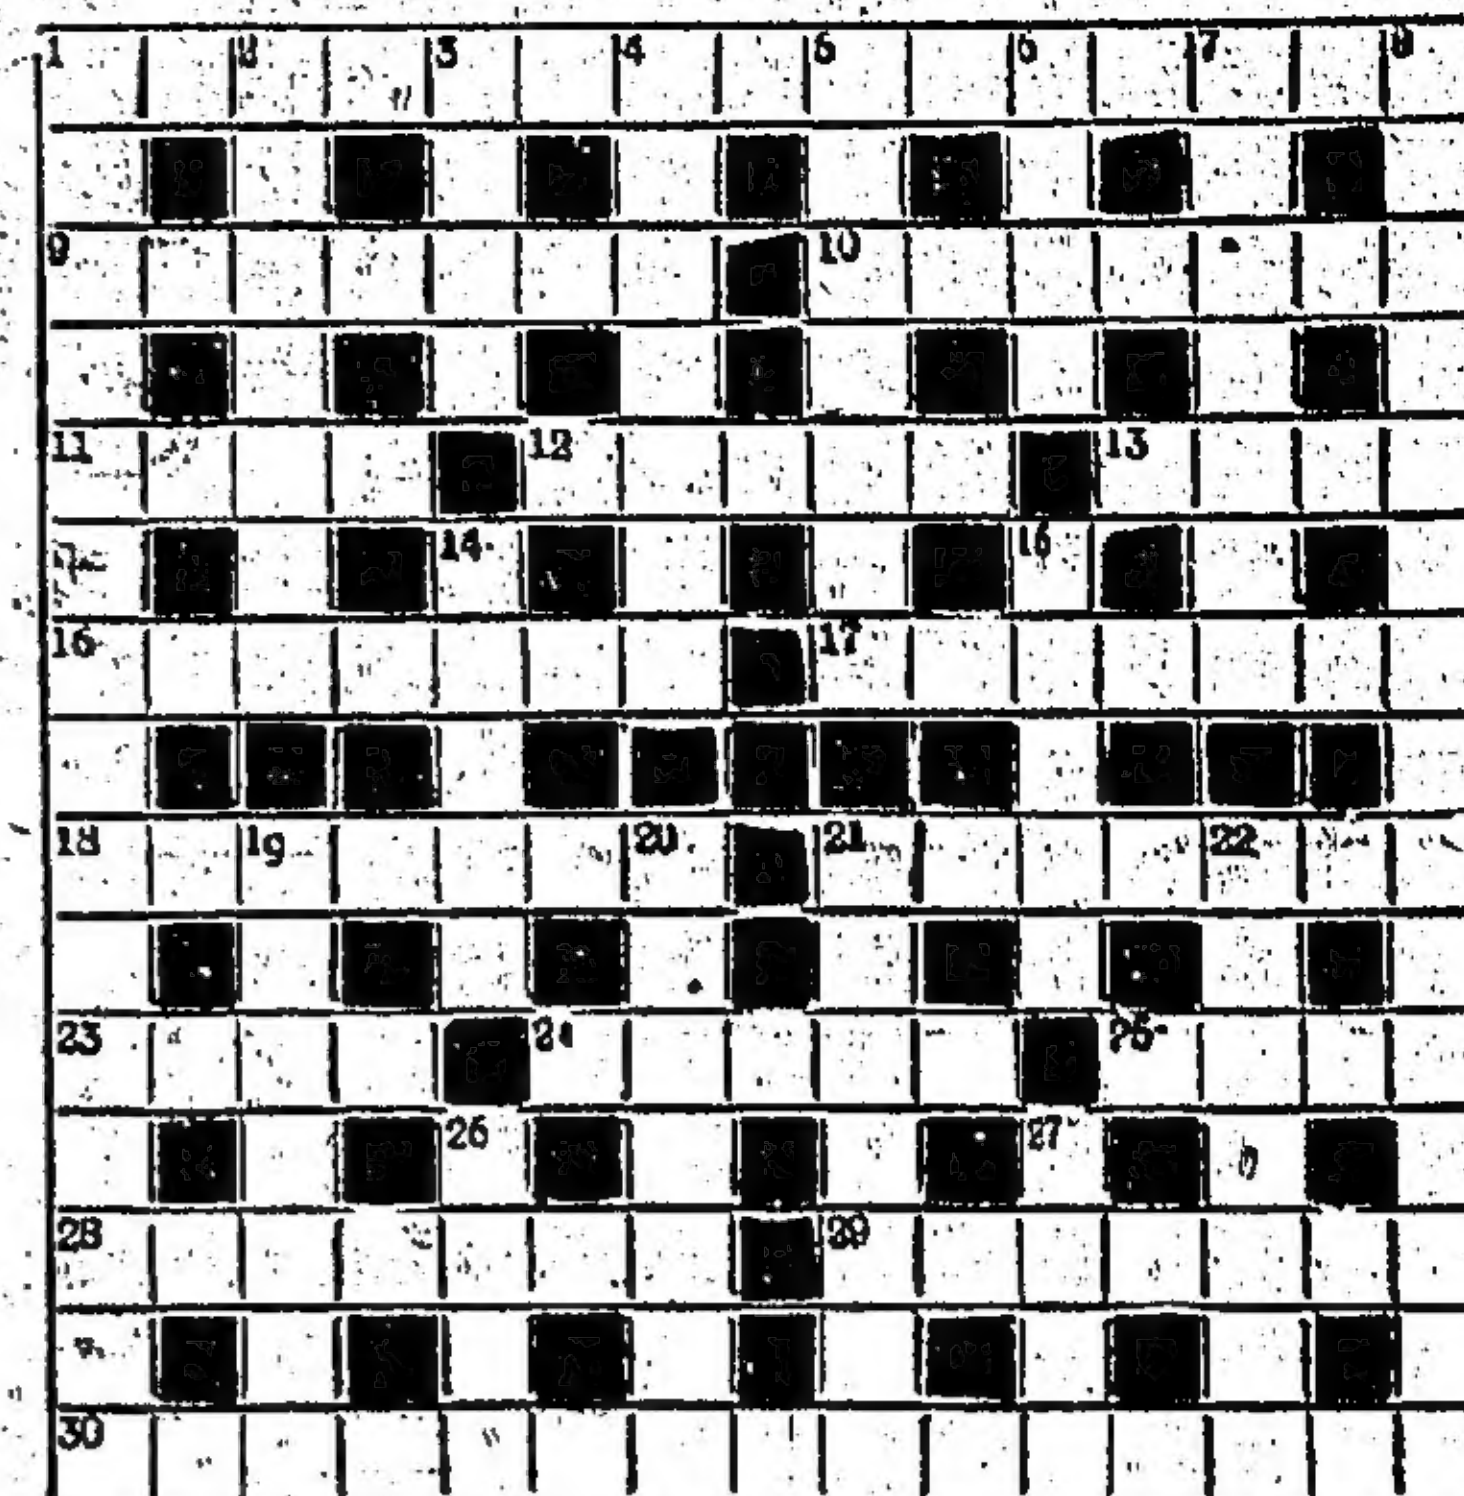

BACON WITH POTATO CAKES

Mix some cold mashed potatoes with flour enough to form a nice dough, season with salt and pepper, and knead till smooth. Turn out on a floured board, roll out to about 1/4 of an inch thickness, and cut in rounds. Fry till brown in bacon fat and serve with friend bacon. These may be prepared the previous evening to save precious time in the morning.

Half a champagne cork makes an amusing clasp on a blue patent leather bag.

SPOTLIGHT

CHAPTER XLVII

It was a day when the rehearsals had been particularly tedious and tiring. No one could please Brady. He halted Sheila's dancing a dozen times, made her repeat, criticized brusquely. The chorus stood watching in awed silence. Sheila alone was unperturbed. She could dance and she knew it. The girls in the chorus were frightened because their turn was coming. If Brady found so much fault with Miss Shayne's dancing what would he think of them?

Sheila danced on. Her feet beat out the lapping rhythm, whirled, stamped and skimmed across the stage. There was a fixed smile on her face. The ringlets of her hair curled tightly on her damp forehead. Brady nodded his head to the rhythm. He was standing with one foot on a chair, one hand beating out the time. Some times he would go far back in the pit of the theater, watching Sheila. Some times he would shout approval, though harsh criticisms were more frequent. Sheila didn't mind. She knew Brady was severe because he demanded the best. She repeated tirelessly until he suddenly announced they were done for the day.

She went to her dressing room happily. Brady must be satisfied with her work or he would not have ended the rehearsal. That in itself was a triumph. It gave her confidence and there is no quality more precious to the actor or actress.

A chorus girl timidly offered condolence for Brady's harsh words. Sheila laughed. "I don't mind," she said. "Bill's all right."

She was weary, though. Every muscle seemed to ache. She must go on with this tireless work until she could dance without thinking about it, until the routine seemed effortless.

There were so many rehearsals and full chorus rehearsals daily. Then came full cast rehearsals. At last Mandrake announced, "We are ready for Atlantic City. The show looks to me like a flop." He always said that dolefully before his outstanding successes.

The company traveled to Atlantic City for the tryout week. There were more rehearsals there. Sheila endured loss of sleep, weariness, the electric restlessness that always precedes an opening night. There were wires for her from Dick. She had positively forbidden him to be present for the first performance.

"I can't do my best with you there," she told him. "Wait until we bring the show to New York."

The first night came and the show was not, as Mandrake had predicted, a flop. It was praised glowingly by the newspapers.

Sheila's name was in the headlines.

The company journeyed back to New York and Sheila thought that she had never been so tired. "It's good thing," another member of the cast told her. "We get so tired we don't care whether the show goes over or not."

Sheila did care. It was not for her own sake but for Blind Timmy. She felt that she must be a success for Timmy. And for Dick, too. She knew Dick would be proud of her. He had always praised her, believed in her ability. She visualized him in the audience, gliding from his orchestra seat to come to her dressing room between the acts. She could see him with Trevor, perhaps, or Dorothy, following every tap of her flying feet as she skimmed over the stage. Oh, yes, she wanted to be a success for Dick!

And so at last the opening night arrived. There was Sheila's name in the big electrical sign, "Sheila Shayne in 'Flying Flaps'." There was her picture in the newspapers. Sheila Shayne starring in "Flying Flaps."

Ever Samper came to see her late in the afternoon. Sheila had been in bed most of the day, resting in accordance with Mandrake's orders. Ever tried to relieve Sheila's worries.

"Just think tonight is another rehearsal," she counseled. "Pre-tend you're in Atlantic City again. You were a wow there!"

"I know. But New York is different."

"You won't be. You'll be a knock-out. Everybody says so."

Ever departed soon and Sheila tried once more to sleep. She could not. She lay with her eyes closed, thinking about Dick. She had not heard from him since morning. At 5:30 Sheila would arise, dress and eat a very light lunch. An hour later she would drive to the theater. Her maid would be there, putting about the dressing room, arranging each cosmetic, each bit of apparel in readiness.

She was just leaving when the telephone rang. Sheila heard Dick's voice over the wire. "Scared?" he asked. "I was when I saw your name in front of the theater."

"Oh, no!" she told him stoutly. "Not a bit!" He would not know that her hand was shaking.

Once in her dressing room, Sheila barred all company. She was frightened, terribly frightened, and much depended on her regaining her composure. Her hands were icy to the touch. Lucy, the maid, quiet and cheerful, comforted her.

"You're going to be a big success," Lucy insisted. Sheila found herself dressed for the first act half an hour before the curtain would go up.

"Here are some telegrams," the maid told her, holding out a stack of coloured envelopes.

There were telegrams from friends scattered throughout the country. Almost all of them were actors and actresses, people she had known during her years of tramping. It was good to read their gay, encouraging messages. There was a knock at the door and the maid answered. Mandrake came in briskly. "How're you feeling?" he asked.

"Scared," Sheila admitted. "That's fine! I've never known a successful star who didn't have stage fright before the curtain. But you've nothing to worry about. You're going to be a big hit, little girl. I'd stake my last dollar on it."

"Don't! You might lose!"

Lucy followed Sheila into the wings as the opening chorus began. In a cleared space Sheila began stretching, bounding, twirling, warming up for her entrance. Nobody paid her the slightest attention.

As she danced the tense look on her face disappeared. Sheila forgot to be frightened. She was thinking only of her dancing now. There came her cue! She fluttered to Lucy's side, tossed a scarf across the maid's arm, smiled, and in another instant was gone.

Now she was on the stage and dancing as she had never danced before. The light patter of applause burst into an uproar. Leaning forward eagerly, the maid watched her. This was not the frightened, trembling girl she had assisted a half hour before. Sheila was a bright elf, bewitched, electrified, holding her audience spellbound.

Each time she appeared it was the same story. The applause filled the theater. Not only for Sheila's numbers but for the other members of the company as well. "Flying Flaps" was a success.

Even before the last curtain, when again and again Sheila was called to receive applause, that fact was apparent. Mandrake appeared with her, bowing. The juvenile lead took a bow. Then the other principals. Then Sheila again, swooping like a gay bird toward the footlights. Blind Timmy was with her, flushed and reluctant.

"Author! Author!" came the cry from the audience. It rose to a crescendo. Where was the author?

Sheila heard Mandrake's voice beside her. "Go with him, Sheila," the producer was saying. "Here!"

She turned. Amazed, unbelieving, she found herself looking up at Dick Stanley!

Deliciously Crisp CRUNCHY CREAM CRACKERS

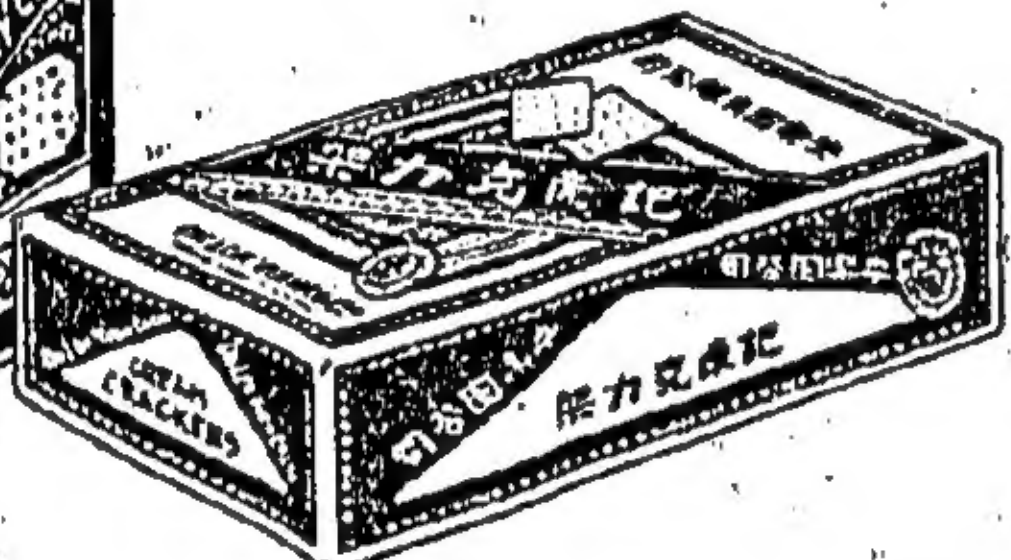

HERE are tasty, flaky biscuits made with the same machinery and by the same modern hygienic methods as the big biscuit makers of England and America employ.

Cream Crackers made with high grade flour, butter and milk; untouched by hand; delightfully crisp and baked to a golden brown by expert workmen in Hong Kong's largest biscuit factory.

Ask at On Lok Yuen's main store; or their branches; or at any good class provision dealer's for a FREE SAMPLE. Test their rich creamy flavour free, and then buy in airtight 1 1/2 lb. tins, $1.00 (Loose 60 cents per lb.)

SODA CRACKERS TOO!

MADE on the same hygienic lines and just as pure and dependable—On Lok Yuen's Soda Crackers: 80 cents 1 1/2 lb. tin, $1.60 2 1/2 lb. tin or 32 cents per lb. loose.

MADE BY
ON LOK YUEN CO. LTD.

Makers of good biscuits in Hong Kong since 1921.

CLAIM FOR WAGES

WRONGFUL DISMISSAL ALLEGED

The hearing of a claim for $939.51 by Emil Landon, of 9, Wing Lok Building, Lock Road, Kowloon, in respect of wages and commission due to him from the Radio Service Ltd., late of Gloucester Arcade, was continued at the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon when, after hearing evidence for the defence, Mr. Justice Lindsell (Acting Justice) reserved judgment until Thursday next.

Mr. F. C. E. Rendall (Messrs. Russ and Co.) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. R. A. Wadson (Messrs. Deacons) for the defendants.

Mr. Wadson said early last year plaintiff called on Mr. Gilbert, one of the directors of the defendant firm, and asked for a job. At that time there was no employment available but eventually, when the firm decided to open a showroom in the Gloucester Arcade, he was engaged as salesman on April 1 at a salary of $200 a month and commission on a monthly basis. On the following day plaintiff asked Mr. Gilbert for an advance of $200 which was paid. At the end of the month he asked for another advance as he was financially embarrassed. Mr. Gilbert drew $100, for which he himself signed, and handed it to plaintiff. About the middle of May plaintiff wanted some more money and drew a further $150.

Letter of Recommendation.

In December it was found that the showroom was not showing a profit and plaintiff was told definitely he would have to find other employment at the end of February. At the end of the month the company found that they had to give a month's notice on the premises and approached plaintiff who agreed to stay on for another month at the same terms, only daily. At about that time plaintiff said there was a post as salesman available at Messrs. Lane Crawford's and was given a letter of recommendation to assist him in obtaining that post. At the end of February he was given his salary for February and a further month's salary, really an ex gratia payment for March. He was also given two compendious orders for $200 each. When he presented them the compendious wished to deduct the $200 which had been advanced, but plaintiff wished to pay in monthly instalments.

Mr. Rendall, in cross examination of Mr. Gilbert after he had given evidence, asked why, in the letter to Messrs. Lane Crawford's plaintiff had been described as manager.

Witness: He was described as manager really in order to give him a little lodes in obtaining the post. He was, compendious in defendant firm, also gave evidence. His Lordship then intimated that he reserved judgment.

members are requested to note the date in order that a good turn out is obtained.

The parade is compulsory for all ranks and counts for efficiency. (Vide the Volunteer Ordinance).

Dress—K. D. Jackets and Breeches, Boots of Regulation pattern, Field Service Hats (with plumes), Belts, Side-arms and Rifles with Slings.

Particular attention must be given to the cleanliness of all buttons, badges, belts and bayonet scabbards. Rifles and bayonets must be drawn before 5 p.m. on Tuesday, April 11th. All ranks who have not yet drawn their plumes must report to the O. C. Company at once.

Corporal E. P. White is detailed as marker for the parade.

WAR CLOUDS IN EUROPE

It would appear that when, in a recent declaration at the Disarmament Conference, a British spokesman declared that "the situation in Europe is degenerating before our eyes," he was speaking the plain, unwelcome truth. The intervention of the British Prime Minister at the Conference, for the express purpose of saving it from failure, was, it is now clear, linked with the wave of anxiety which has of late been sweeping Europe. Lost some cause arise leading to a fresh outbreak of war. Later, the visits to Rome and Paris were made in the hope of evolving a Four-Power Pact to preserve peace and to provide the machinery for the pacific adjustment of incidents which might lead to major crises. Yet, despite all these efforts, it is still clear that suspicion and distrust have not been dissipated. Italy complains of France desiring to whittle down the proposed pact, while France on her part charges Italy and Germany with seeking to block the Disarmament Conference. But it would seem that Franco-German tension is the chief danger at the moment. Inveighing recently against the Versailles Treaty, the German Foreign Minister asserted that there was still a tendency to form a united anti-German front in Europe, adding that either Germany must go her own way to justice and freedom and become a bulwark of peace, or Europe would totter into the abyss. There can be no questioning the point that there are influences still at work aiming to keep Germany in a position of subjection. That way, danger lies. Much has happened since the Great War to demonstrate the futility of such a policy. But against this fact we have to place another, namely, that the intense ultra-nationalism displayed by the Nazis has in it the elements of danger to the peace of Europe. France, of course, is suspicious, and the talk of "security" goes on apace. The moment, however, is not one in which to apportion blame. It is the task of statesmanship to prevent present friction flaring up into direct hostility. As President Roosevelt has declared, in welcoming the British Premier to the United States, the world situation calls for realistic action. That is especially true of Europe, which at the moment is politically unstable and fearful of the future. If the Disarmament Conference fails, or the efforts to bring about political accord come to naught, there will develop a more intense nationalism, which in turn will make it practically impossible to achieve anything at the World Economic Conference. All these issues are closely interwoven. The choice is between co-operation now and conflict later. Forces which are working for war must be curbed. If they are not, almost before we know it there will be created a situation of such gravity as is too terrible to contemplate.

Germany To-day

While developments in Germany inspire more alarm than confidence, it much be recognized that the embarrassing manifestation of nationalism and the campaign against the Jews present only one side of the picture. Accurate perspective must give due weight to the other side. There is a stark movement toward social and administrative experiments, but there is also the vigorous search for a type of government which can demand popular sanction. Without question there is propaganda, as vigorous as it is clever, against Versailles; yet recognition of manifest injustices of the peace treaty is not limited to the confines of the Reich. There is talk of militarism; there is also a vast volume of pacific, even if inarticulate, sentiment. Strife and conflict spring from lack of work, but there also is a herculean effort to solve the basic problem of unemployment. Charges of corruption touch the agricultural subsidies, yet thousands of honest farmers have been enabled to "carry on" only through assistance of the Government. Undoubtedly there is a sharp tendency toward economic nationalism; against this is a picture of a country battling to defend its markets from competition with nationals having the temporary advantage of a depreciated currency. Beyond the very serious difficulties and behind the facade of unrest must be recognized an industrious and stable population. For every district where political clashes are reported, half a hundred go peacefully about their business. Surely not all of Germany is to be understood by what a German commentator has deplored as "so much running-up and down stairs in the superstructure of politics."

A. Prerequisite of Peace

Time was, and that not so long ago, that verbatim records of diplomatic conferences were seldom given to the public, and when they were, their phraseology was incomprehensible to the average reader. The change in this particular, wrought in the last decade at what is sometimes called "the sounding board of the world," Geneva, is worthy of note. An example of this improved technique, and one applied in circumstances quite without precedent, was the 15,000-word official draft report of the Committee of Nineteen. Although the record dealt with a profoundly complex situation, it was easy reading. There was none of the trappings of expression, repetitions or circumlocutions once an accomplishment of a State paper. In giving the historical background, both before Sept. 18, 1931, and since, in dealing with actions on the part of China and Japan that raise debatable points; in quoting provisions laid down in the Covenant of the League of Nations, the Pact of Paris, and the Nine Power treaty, the report was unflinching clear, and not lacking in dramatic force. Part III may in time become a classic among summaries. There, in less than three pages, was graphically set forth the outstanding features of the situation. This is a heartening portent to the man in the street who desires to be informed on what is happening in the world.

AS OTHERS SEE US ENGLAND THROUGH GERMAN EYES

BY E. L. ALLEN

During the War, a German professor of English moved, as he tells us, by the spectacle of the two countries he knew and loved best locked in a life-and-death struggle, resolved that when peace came he would make it his mission to interpret England to his own people:

The book which Prof. Dibelius wrote with that end in view bears the simple title 'England', and was translated into English some three years ago. It is a monument of German thoroughness, revealing at times an intimate acquaintance with out-of-the-way details of our national life. More than that, it is written without a trace of hatred.

There are times indeed when it amazes one by the sympathy and appreciation which it displays, while there are occasions on which it reveals our national faults with an honesty which is healthily disturbing.

A GLORIFIED CUP FINAL

Who can say, for example,—to pick out one of the humorous points in the book—that there is not a good deal of truth in Dibelius's account of British political life? The Englishman, he says, is not at all interested in good government. What he asks for is simply a good fight between two opposing teams, a sort of glorified cup-final played every five years or so!

There is much in the book which is of the utmost value, and one only regrets that it has not aroused in England the interest which it certainly deserves. I single out two points for special mention—the analysis of our national character, and the new answer which is given to the old question "What is the secret of England's greatness?"

The Englishman of to-day, so Dibelius finds, is compounded of three separate individuals, the Saxon farmer, the medieval knight, and the Puritan.

The groundwork of our mentality is identical with that of the Low German peasant of the present day, and our individualism is an inheritance from a small agricultural community in which each man cultivated his own strip of land but all strips were alike. "The Englishman desires to be lord in his castle, but inside that castle exactly like everyone else."

The influence of medieval chivalry is, to be seen in the respect for women, the passion for sport, the love of pageantry and outward show, and the tyranny of convention which are so characteristic of the Englishman.

KEY TO BRITISH HISTORY

Our ideal is that of the 'gentleman', the man who does not need to work but only to play, and prominence in sport is with us a better title to social prestige than intellectual ability. Finally, there is something in us of the Puritan. It is from this source that the Englishman derives his energy, his moral earnestness, and what seems to others his too confident identification of his own interests with the will of God and the good of humanity.

It is in this last fact that Dibelius sees the key to a right understanding of Britain's history as an imperial nation. He rejects unhesitatingly the Continental accusation of hypocrisy which is brought against us, and, of course, he dismisses our own equally facile assumption that our triumph is the reward of outstanding virtue.

England, he says, has given the world two things of imperishable value, the dramas of Shakespeare and the free state. The free state, again, rests on two specifically English assumptions—common-sense and the transformation of the antagonist into a privileged colleague. That the French Canadian and the Boer should have been willing to cross the seas and fight in Britain's battles seems to him an event without parallel.

MARVELOUS SYNTHESIS

British policy has succeeded because it has been a marvellous synthesis of self-interest and world-good. Fortune placed us in a position in which altruism came naturally, for what was of benefit to mankind usually coincided with what was to our own advantage.

Thus Free Trade was a noble humanitarian ideal; all barriers between the nations were to be broken down, the world was to form one society of mutual aid—and all markets were to be open to British goods!

Loyalty to the League of Nations is the corner-stone of British foreign policy; it alone can persuade the world to sink its submarines, put its poison-gas to milder uses—and acquiesce permanently in Britain's possession of the richest quarters of the globe!

'Britain is the solitary Great Power with a national programme which, while egotistic through and through, promises to the world as a whole something which the world passionately desires—order, progress, and eternal peace.'

'England is the single country in the world that, in looking after its own interest with meticulous care, has at the same time something to give to others; the single country where patriotism does not represent a threat or a challenge to the rest of the world; the single country that invariably summons the most progressive, idealistic, and efficient forces in other nations to co-operate with it.'

[Controversialist's articles on the Hongkong Cabaret will be resumed on Monday.]

"Aren't you going to claim exemption for all that money you've spent on liquor for customers?"

Bustles are coming back, according to a fashion note. Come to think of it, they'd look funny anywhere else.

What some of our flappers seem to forget is that a girl can burn the candle at both ends and still not be very bright.

A notice in a morning contemporary gives Messrs. Lane, Crawford, Ltd. the rare distinction of discovering a new name for bananas—"Fruit Sausages."

Old Mother Hubbard one day at the club heard An eminent counsel's opinion; He charged her no fee for the name of the "gee," And advised her to put her last guinea on.

This vogue for realism has become so intense that there's very little reserved in the cinemas these days except the seats.

MAXIMUM TERM IMPOSED

OBSCENE PICTURES HAWKED

"They are pictures of the most abominable type I have ever seen during my experience in the police," said Detective-Sergeant MacDonald at the Central Police Court this morning, when, before Mr. Wynne-Jones, he charged Young Tak, unemployed, with possession of 195 postcards of an obscene nature.

The prosecution was the result of a complaint by a member of the community, to whom the police saw defendant hand the pictures. Defendant also offered to sell them to him at $12 per 100. Yesterday evening, Sergeant MacDonald met the defendant in Queen's Road near Battery Path and he quoted a price for the pictures, whereupon he was arrested by a Chinese detective.

His Worship imposed the maximum penalty of $250, or three months imprisonment, and ordered the postcards to be destroyed immediately.

WIRELESS MUSIC

HOTEL ADDITION IS COPYRIGHT BREACH

London, Apr. 7. A most important decision in a test case has been given by the Chancery Court, affecting copyright works broadcast by wireless.

The plaintiffs, "The Performing Rights Society," sought an injunction restraining the defendants, Hammond's Brewery, from the alleged infringement of copyright of certain musical works.

The defendants denied that auditions to hotel guests constituted a further performance, entitling the plaintiffs to royalties.

As the plaintiffs disclaimed a desire for an injunction, the Judge ruled that the defendants had infringed the plaintiffs copyright by performing them publicly without consent, on the ground that the Copyright Act had been passed for the benefit of authors of all kinds, and wireless auditions to the general public constituted a performance entitling the payment of royalties.

The decision does not affect the rights of private listeners. — Reuter Special.

NEW RECRUITS

FOREIGN RESIDENTS JOIN VOLUNTEER UNIT

It will be observed in the Hongkong Defence Corps orders, published on another page, that there is a long list of new recruits, forty in number, of whom no fewer than thirty-eight are of German, Dutch, Danish and Norwegian nationality, for the most part well-known residents of some years standing. They are all enlisted in the A.S.C. Cadre.

These gentlemen applied some time ago for permission to serve in some useful capacity with the defence forces, and their recruitment into a non-combatant unit is permissible. It is understood that the permission to recruit them into the A.S.C. Cadre of the Hongkong Volunteers was recently granted, and this accounts for the large batch of names published in a single order.

Their public-spirited action will be greatly appreciated by the British residents of the Colony.

VARIETY CONCERT

ENJOYABLE PROGRAMME AT HEADQUARTERS

The variety entertainment in aid of the Disabled Officers' Garden Homes and the site for the new Cheero Club, given at Volunteer Headquarters last night, was a complete success, and will be repeated to-night.

His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., the Commander-in-Chief, Admiral Sir Frederick Dreyer, K.C.B. and Lady Dreyer, the General Officer Commanding, Major-General O. C. Borrett, C.B., C.M.G., and Mrs. Borrett and the Bishop of Victoria, Rt. Rev. Ronald Hall, under whose distinguished patronage the entertainment was given, were present.

An appreciative audience listened to a programme that was well-balanced and was fully representative of the Navy, Army and local talent. All combined to make a harmonious whole, and the prompt manner in which the programme was carried out added much to the success of the evening. The second half of the entertainment was devoted to a comedy in one act, entitled "The Chance of a Lifetime" in which some well-known local stage players acquitted themselves with much credit.

On the arrival of H.E. the Governor, who was accompanied by Mr. J. G. Filcher, Private Secretary, four buglers sounded a welcome blast. The programme opened with a pleasing overture played by the string band of the Lincolnshire Regiment.

Appeal for Funds.

The opening item of the entertainment presented Major E. F. W. Grellier, of the Medical Corps, seated in an invalid's wheelchair and with a covering over the right eye. He told, of the functions of the Officers' Garden Homes in Watford, and made a human appeal for funds to help forward the good work. The Major was ably assisted by Private Stephens, of the Army Dental Corps, who amusingly told of the days when the Cheero Club was situated at the City Hall.

"The white ants became members and we were driven out," he said. He thanked, on behalf of all the servicemen, all the ladies who were helping to find a new Cheero home.

The voices of the made voice choir of the South Wales Borders, blended in splendid harmony in the rendering of "Song of the Vikings" and "Comrades in Arms." The latter was especially appealing and brought forth much applause.

Captain R. L. Burnett, R.N., was in humorous vein and he gave impressions of many stage celebrities, including Ronald Lindsay. His rendering of "Old King Cole" brought forth vociferous applause, and the audience joined in heartily in the refrain, singing the words "There's none so fair, that can compare with the H.K.V.D.C.—now!"

The illuminated club swinging by Mr. E. F. Sell, of the Y.M.C.A., was extremely well done and won deserved recognition from the audience. The performance was effective, and is indeed worth seeing.

Mr. Li Chor-chi, the well-known tenor, won much applause with his renderings of Tosini's works "II Pescatore Cantata" and "Aprile." He was ably accompanied by Lt. Col. C. H. Kuhne, D.S.O.

Another favourite voice over the radio, the Rev. J. N. Lewis Bryan, delighted with humorous selections.

The audience was kept in continuous roars of laughter, and the artist scored heavily with his rendering of the quack doctor "Johnathan J."

singing was indulged in with gusto, old war-time favourites, such as "Tipperary," "Pack Up Your Troubles," and "Keep the Home Fires Burning," being sung. The singing was led by the Rev. Lewis Bryan.

"The Chance of a Lifetime" a comedy in one act, which was produced by Ralph Shrigley, assisted by Major Grellier, was presented after the interval. The scene was the living room in the Perkins' home and the plot centered round the Grand Chan's diamond of which the Perkins suddenly come into possession. As Mrs. Perkins, Rita Cole was splendid, while Sydney West, scored yet another stage success in the role of Mr. Perkins. Jessica Cousins, as Miss Perkins, Gordon Thomson, as the Stranger, and Edmond Brasier, as Albert Watkins, the Yard detective, rendered capable support.

The object of the Disabled Officers' Garden Homes. (Registered under the War Charities Act 1916) is the provision of Bungalow Homes, where married Officers of both Services, who were partially disabled during the Great War, may live rent free for the remainder of their lives. These bungalows, which are being built at Watford, have allotments attached in which the Officers can cultivate garden produce for sale.

The lives of six Officers and their families have been changed from anxiety to a possibility of happiness by being given the six Homes which have already been completed; but there is a very urgent need of 25,000 to enable six more to be completed by July 1933, in order to obtain a promised Government subsidy of £7-10 per Home annually for a period of 40 years.

All Donations will be most gratefully received and acknowledged by Mrs. O. C. Borrett, Flagstaff House, if sent before April 14, when they will be cabled to the Hon. Treasurer in England, together with 50 per cent. of the amount received from this entertainment and other sources.

The Cheero Club.

The remaining half of the proceeds from this entertainment, together with any other donations received for the purpose, will be utilised for the re-opening of the Cheero Club. The activities of this Club, which are so well-known in Hongkong, had to be suspended owing to lack of funds and the unavoidable closing of the old City Hall.

Since 1927 the Club has, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., offered to all Service Men a meeting place with a social and homelike atmosphere, where they were readily welcomed to read, write their letters, play games, and obtain refreshments at very moderate rates.

HISTORY OF ARCH

INTERESTING LECTURE BY MR. S. V. BOXER

"The Historical Development of the Arch in Architecture" formed the subject of an interesting lecture given by Mr. Stanley V. Boxer, B.Sc., under the auspices of the Hongkong University Engineering Society last night.

The lecturer pointed out that in the first place all structural architecture resolved itself into one of two essentially different types: trabeated, where beams were used, and arcuated, where arches or vaults were employed. The earliest form of architecture was trabeated. All Greek structures standing to-day consisted of lintels resting on columns the accumulative effect of which must have been very effective, but which were of course very extravagant in material. It was not until the Roman period that the arch first appeared in common use, and then it did so, not so much as a simple arch as a barrel shaped vault.

The Romans lived a different type of life from the Greeks. They required large halls for their assemblies, and the multiplicity of columns of the Greek type of building rendered this type quite unsuitable for the purposes for which the Roman wished to use their buildings. The barrel-vaulted building (roofed, it should be noted, not in masonry laid up in mortar, but in Roman cement) was narrow for its length. Consequently the idea occurred of having two or three barrel vaults side by side, and arching the intervening walls. It was then discovered that by having vaults side by side the thrust of the one could be counteracted by the bursting thrust of the other, so that apart from the walls at the extreme sides of the building, walls could be made much lighter. Finally transverse barrel vaults were used, and the columnar effect much lightened.

The Byzantine Style.

The Romans were never stinted for money or material, and were able to build on such an extensive scale because they could afford to do so. They resisted the bursting stresses of arches, vault and domes, by sheer mass of weight in the abutment walls. When the Roman Empire disintegrated, the Christian Church took up the matter of church building; but funds were scarce, and they could not employ the expensive methods of their forerunners. In Eastern Europe, a style known as Byzantine sprang up, where the essential feature was the dome. The Romans had employed the dome, but only on a circular wall. This was unsuitable for covering a church whose plan was a Greek cross. Such a cross could be divided into five squares, and the Byzantines evolved a method of making a circular dome cover a square space, and by having five such domes covering the five squares referred to they were able to stone-roof an entire church. They moreover were able to resist thrust by thrust instead of by sheer mass, and so economise material.

In the west however architecture developed along a wholly different line. There must have been much disappointment among the would-be builders as vault after vault fell in. But experience taught them at last, and in teaching them, the marvellous beauty of Gothic Architecture appeared, not as a thing deliberately sought, but as a

with this special film-removing tooth paste

If you were to allow your teeth to go even one day without brushing them, a coating of film would form and hide their natural brilliance. Your teeth would become dull and unattractive. You could easily see this ugly coating by looking into the mirror or feel it by rubbing your tongue over your teeth.

The new cleansing and polishing material in Pepsodent Tooth Paste gently removes this film and reveals the clean enamel surfaces of your teeth. Besides removing this dull coating, Pepsodent polishes teeth to a sparkling brilliance. It does these two things with perfect safety, because its cleansing and polishing material is soft—yes, twice as soft—as that ordinarily used in tooth pastes. HISTORY OF ARCH necessary condition for Gothic construction.

The Byzantines had solved the problem of vaulting as far as square spaces were concerned, but the early Gothic architects found that square spaces were not suitable for their style of building, and tried to vault rectangular spaces, a thing the Romans had not attempted to do. All sorts of complex problems presented themselves, even in the vaulting of a square space. For the Gothic builder had advanced thus far beyond the Roman that he was attempting to build his roof of ribs, with light infilling between, a much more scientific and economical process than solid vaulting. Now, if two equal semi-circular or barrel-vaults intersect, their intersection is an ellipse. The medieval architect knew nothing of ellipses, and could not set out the diagonal ribs. Instead, they set out semi-circular ribs both diagonally and round the space to be vaulted. The resulting vault was somewhat dome shaped but not a dome in the Byzantine sense at all. It was twisted also, and difficult to build.

When however the space was rectangular, obviously either the crown of the arches had to be of different height, or else the arch had to be tilted, so that the springings of the smaller arch had to be tilted, so that the springings of the smaller arch was higher than the springing of the larger. In the latter case, which was the method adopted, specimens of which may be seen in many noble Norman churches, such as Durham Cathedral, the intersection of the two barrel vaults was in plan a wavy line, and obviously this could not be employed as a rib.

The Gothic Architecture.

Then came the wonderful inspiration which has given us Gothic architecture as we know it. The architects wanted the two crowns of their vaults to be so nearly as possible horizontal, so as to avoid the unsightly pseudo-dome. They still could think of no better way of forming the diagonal than by using semi-circular ribs. But instead of having semi-circular longitudinal and transverse vaulting, they hit on the plan of forming their arch of two segments meeting at a point; and by suitably selecting the radius of these segments they could raise the point to any height they liked. The method was, of course, a compromise. The true shape to fit in with the semi-circular diagonal rib would have been an ellipse. But it worked, and it has given us the glorious pointed arch of Early English

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

THEOSOPHISTS' HONOUR
LATE MR. MANUK

A memorial service for the late Mr. M. Manuk was held at the Theosophical Society's Rooms yesterday evening. There was a large gathering of friends of the late Theosophical leader, including Miss Mary Manuk, his sister, and one of the founders of the lodge.

Impressive scenes were witnessed during the service. Many flowers, sent by friends of the late Mr. Manuk surrounded the platform. Incense was burnt throughout.

Tributes to the great work done by Mr. Manuk for the Society were paid by Mr. J. Russell, Mr. Paul (President of the Society), Mr. B. Talat, and Dr. Reichelt.

Mr. Russell disclosed that Mr. Manuk had been responsible for his entry into the theosophical movement. He had always been a Christian and a keen student of religion, but he felt he was a much better Christian after Mr. Manuk had finished with him.

In commercial life, said Mr. Russell, Mr. Manuk was highly respected and his opinions were widely sought. His energy was amazing and his time was fully occupied.

Mr. Russell regretted that many of the able lectures which Mr. Manuk had delivered were not taken down and printed.

"There is no grave to worship, no monument of stone to mark the spot where his body rests, yet we have a memory that cannot fade—a monument of a life well spent," said Mr. Russell.

Mr. Paul in a short address said he had no doubt but that Mr. Manuk was one of the Great Ones, in constant touch with the Masters. It was up to them to take up the work he had done so well.

ecclesiastical architecture.

The thrust of such vaulting had of course still to be dealt with. The Gothic architect had brought the principle of concentration of stresses along ribs, and down columns to perfection. He proceeded to show his further economy of material by carrying the thrusts of the main vaulting down to the ground by means of further arches within the building, thus making use of much of the space which the Romans would have discarded. Frequently also flying buttresses outside the building carried stresses too high up to be dealt with by the above method, all eventually being brought down to the ground or to massive buttresses.

The main point to consider, however, was that the Gothic architect had produced a framed structure, strong where strength was required, the rest being simply infilling. The result was grace and beauty, not deliberately sought, but the reward of fitness.

Window openings followed the general lines of the interior. When walls were no longer needed for structural strength, they could be pierced to almost any extent, and to that, and to the need in a northern climate of admitting rather than keeping out the sunlight, we owe the marvellous stained glass windows of many of the cathedrals and abbeys of northern Europe.

K.C.C. LOSE LAWN BOWLERS

THE SEASON'S PROSPECTS

Club to Do Best Under
Big Difficulties

ENTHUSIASM IN PLENTY

This is the second of a series of articles dealing with the prospects of local bowls clubs for the approaching season.

NO. 2 K.C.C.

There is a spirit of quiet determination among the bowling section of the Kowloon Cricket Club. Deprived entirely of one of their leading rinks through home furloughs, and with small prospects of any newcomers putting in an appearance to make good the deficit, the K.C.C. enter the league this summer on their mettle.

Realising their prospects for picking the big plums are slight, they are, nevertheless, getting down to serious practice and that they will give the best possible account of themselves is assured.

HEAVY LOSSES

Depleted ranks among sports teams is a common enough experience in Hongkong where the population is so transitory, but the losses sustained in this direction by the K.C.C. this year are unusually heavy and home leave robs them of several of their prominent bowlers.

Only to-day the Ranpura takes away from them J. C. Lyal, one of their best slips, together with his colleague A. C. Burford, whilst H. M. McTavish, who last season played No. 2 in this rink had adieu to the club, completely breaking up one rink in the senior team.

But the enthusiasm in the club remains, and already numbers have answered the call of the green and have been putting in steady practice.

HAPPIER NOTE.

A happier note too is struck when it is realised that the Club will again enjoy the services of A. E. Silkestone and H. Overy, who are back in the Colony from furlough.

The K.C.C. may not win the championships this summer, but, as one of the members remarked, "We are going to have some good games and enjoy ourselves."

Visitors to the club will find the green in wonderful condition. Careful attention during the winter has worked wonders and it can still boast of being one of the finest bowling greens in the Colony.

Of course the annual club events are being arranged. These include the President's and Vice-President's Cups, the Pairs Handicap, Novices Competition and Club Handicap, whilst teams will again compete in the Spey Royal Cup.

Last season was by no means the most successful enjoyed by the Club so far as position in the league tables were concerned, but despite their losses, there is no reason why the teams should not do better this summer.

Private advice has been received in Hongkong that Lance Sergt. P. B. Peters, of the 1st Battalion Irish Guards, won the Amateur Boxing Association's welter-weight championship in Portsmouth on Thursday night.

Peters has been the Inter-service Boxing Champion since 1931, and last year was runner-up in the Amateur Boxing Association welter-weight championship.

The new champion's brother is stationed in Hongkong, aboard H.M.S. Wild Swan.

INCIGNITOS FACE AN OBJECTION

PROTEST AGAINST TIME EXTENSION

A protest has been sent to the Secretary of the Mamak Tournament against any further extension of time to enable the Incognitos to complete their fixtures in the tournament. The letter comes from one of the competing teams the reason being that as the Kowloon Indians, another civilian team competing have been able to play all their matches despite a handicap of not possessing a ground of their own therefore it should have been possible for the Incogs, who are similarly handicapped to have played off all their matches within the time specified in the rules of the committee, viz March 31st.

The Incogs have a match each day until next Monday, the extended date which leaves them to play one match to complete their 22 games. This is against the Tamar and the game, if possible will be arranged for to-morrow morning, and failing this the Tamar will concede the points to the Incogs. The Incogs have notified their willingness to play two games to-morrow.

K.C.C. MEMBERS LEAVE

PRESENTATION

Members of the Kowloon Cricket Club bade farewell to two popular colleagues last night, and signalled the occasion with a presentation to one and a courtesy dinner to the other.

The departing members were A. C. Burford, and J. C. Lyal, who sailed for home on the Ranpura this morning.

Mr. Burford, who has been an active member of the Club for some ten years, and has especially interested himself in the bowls section, was the recipient of a gift from his colleagues, whilst an informal dinner was held in honour of John Lyal, one of the Club's leading cricketers and lawn bowlers.

PRESIDENT'S TRIBUTE.

Mr. R. E. Lindsell (President) presided at both functions, and in making the presentation to Mr. Burford mentioned his active association with the Club for so long. They regretted his departure which unfortunately would be, for good, but they would remember his work for the Club, said Mr. Lindsell.

Apart from being a first class exponent of lawn bowls, Mr. Burford had for the past two or three years been responsible for the supervision of the bowling green, and the successful manner in which he carried out this none too

K.C.C. BILLIARDS.

FINCHER AND HAMBLY TOURNAMENT WINNERS.

Two matches were played off in the first round of the K.C.C. billiards handicap tournament last evening, when R. B. Hamby (rec. 30) beat J. R. Canning (lowe 50) by 250 to 184, and F. Fincher (lowe 30) beat F. Goodwin (lowe 20) by 250 points to 179.

easy task was reflected in the excellent green which the club and their visitors enjoyed.

In addition to this Mr. Burford had served for a year on the Club's committee and in every other way had proved himself a tireless worker and a great sportsman.

The dinner to Mr. Lyal, was quite informal, but the chair was taken by Mr. Lindsell, and short complimentary speeches were made during the evening.

MAMAK HOCKEY.

Incognitos Easily Defeat Royal Engineers.

FOUR GOALS TO NIL.

In the first of their last five matches in the Mamak Hockey Tournament, the Incognitos defeated the Royal Engineers four goals to nil on the Marina ground yesterday. The civilian team had the upper hand for most of the game, and was not unduly extended.

By the time the whistle blew for the first half, the Incognitos had already established a two-goal lead, and in the second half they piled up another two. Xavier (2), Pinto and W. Reed were the goal-scorers.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES.

By hiring "extras" who had actually worked in a bank, authentic atmosphere was maintained in "American Madness", the up-to-the-minute Columbia film, hailed as the great American picture of to-day. The film features Walter Huston as Tom Dickson, a bank president who believes that money should be lent on character rather than fluctuating collateral, such as stocks and bonds, if the country is to pull out of depression into prosperity. The picture, which deals with a daring and sensational theme, will be at the Queen's Theatre to-morrow. About 150 former bank employees consisting of tellers, adding machine operators and financial secretaries who had seen actual service before retrenchment became necessary in various banking institutions, were used. Columbia was able to aid them with a week's work while inside sequences were being shot. Names of bank workers out of jobs were obtained through personal directors. In all, about 100 "extras" were used. Frank Capra, director of "American Madness", worked with a cast which included, besides Huston, Pat O'Brien, Kay Johnson, Constance Cummings, Gavin Gordon, Edwin Maxwell, Burton Churchill, Robert Ellis, Anderson Lawlor and Jeanne Sorel, who makes her Columbia debut, in "American Madness".

"Street Scene"

It was merely an accident of birth, that made the great city of New York the locale of "Street Scene", which comes to the King's Theatre on Sunday. Had the author of this prize drama, Elmer Rice, been born and drawn his characters from the life of any other American city, large or small, his characters would have been the same flesh and blood. For "Street Scene" is the story of the conflict and emotions, the fleeting joys and longer heart-aches of human characters in an environment which is the same in every city. "A cross-section of New York life" it was called when it was presented as a stage play. In bringing it to the larger panorama of the screen, with King Vidor directing and Sylvia Sydney, William Collier, Jr., and Estelle Taylor in the leading roles, Samuel Goldwyn is presenting it as a cross-section of the entire world.

"A Bill of Divorcement"

What becomes of the pathetic shell-shocked men who return to their homes from the war and attempt to pick up the threads of their lives? It is one of these shell-shocked soldiers who serves as the central character in the dramatic RKO-Radio Picture, "A Bill of Divorcement", starring John Barrymore at the Central to-day. Barrymore plays the role of a broken wreath of a composer who tries to adapt himself to the changed conditions he finds in his home after a long absence. The sacrifice of his daughter to insure his and his wife's ultimate happiness, Billie Burke, Katharine Hepburn, David Manners, Paul Cavanagh, Henry Stephenson, Elizabeth Patterson and Gayle Evers comprise the supporting cast which was directed with telling effect by George Cukor.

"Svengali"

"Svengali," the Warner Bros. production featuring John Barrymore in which he portrays the character of the master hypnotist who won such fame on the stage a generation ago, in "Tribly", will be shown finally at the Queen's Theatre to-day. "Tribly", which was written and illustrated by George Du Maurier, first swept the English-speaking countries as a novel and won even greater acclaim as a play. It depicts with grim power the evil control of Svengali over the pretty artist's model of the Latin Quarter. "Svengali" is Mr. Barrymore's most dynamic role. It provides a worthy vehicle with which to demonstrate the almost hypnotic power of the art which made his "Peter Ibbetson", "Richard" and "Hamlet" so unforgettable. Marian Marsh, greatest discovery of the year, was chosen by the star to play the part of Tribly. Others in the cast are Bramwell Fletcher, Donald Cripp, Lumsden Hare, Carmel Myers, Luis Alarni, Perle Boros and Paul Porcasi.

CHINESE RECEPTION.

HONGKONG'S WELCOME FOR MAYOR OF CANTON

The Mayor of Canton, Mr. Liu Chi-wan, was the honoured guest at a tiffin reception, which was given by leading Chinese residents and representatives of commercial and educational circles, at the Hotel Cecil yesterday.

Over one hundred Chinese were present, and the Chairman, Mr. Mok Ying-kwai, delivered a speech of welcome and voiced the gathering's warm appreciation of the Canton official's presence. Mr. Mok also took the opportunity to thank the Mayor for his hospitality at the time the Hongkong merchants were entertained by him, last month, when on a visit to the Canton Municipal Industrial Fair.

In his reply the Mayor recalled the great assistance rendered by overseas Chinese to make the Chinese revolution successful, and appealed to the overseas Chinese to continue their help to make the reconstruction of China an early realisation. He thanked the hosts for their excellent entertainment.

Among others who spoke were Messrs. Ma Man-fai, Tam Tao-king, Wong Tong, Chiu Chen-yu, and a few others. In the large gathering present were noticed Messrs. Ma Ying-piu, Chiu Chao-fan, Mok Kon-sang, Wu Pak-shing, Lam Kwai-sang, Ng Yow-ting, Ng Chi-kun and many others.

EX-POLICEMAN FINED.

ASSAULT ON DISTRICT WATCHMAN PROVED

After a protracted hearing, which began on March 16, the case in which Lo Chuen, an ex-constable of the Hongkong Police Force and Chu Laiying, stated to be his wife, were charged with assaulting and obstructing District Watchmen Nos. 17 and 24 at Tai Wo Street on March 10, was concluded before Mr. Schofield in the Central Police Court yesterday afternoon.

The prosecution was led by Detective-Sergeant Fitches, on behalf of the Police, while Mr. C. Y. Kwan was for the defence.

The Magistrate convicted both defendants on the charge of assaulting watchman number 24, but discharged them on the count in regard to the other Police officer. His Worship held that the male defendant, in giving evidence at the last hearing, almost committed perjury in the witness box.

His Worship imposed a fine of $200 on Lo Chuen and also bound him over to be of good behaviour for a year. The woman was fined $50.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

When holding the king, queen and x of the opening leader's suit, in playing the hand at no trump, you are confronted with two different hold-up problems, depending upon which way you must take a finesse in another suit. Take for example the following hand. South, playing the hand at three no trump, will get the diamond opening from West, who will open the fourth best of that suit. East will play the jack, and before playing to the trick, the declarer must analyze the hand.

He can see four sure spade tricks, one diamond, a sure heart trick and a sure club trick—seven in all. To make his contract he must take the club finesse.

With the ace and queen of clubs in dummy he must finesse to the East hand; therefore when East plays the jack on the first diamond lead, the declarer must hold up and refuse to win the trick, playing the seven. When East returns the nine of diamonds, declarer will play the queen, and if West wins the trick with the ace and returns another diamond, declarer will win the trick with the king.

He will then take his club finesse and East will have no other diamond to return. His natural return will be a heart; and South must not finesse, but must go right up with his ace.

Now let us suppose that it is South who holds the ace and queen of clubs. West would still open a diamond. The declarer now holds the ace of clubs and the club finesse must be taken toward the West hand—in other words, towards the hand which holds all the diamonds.

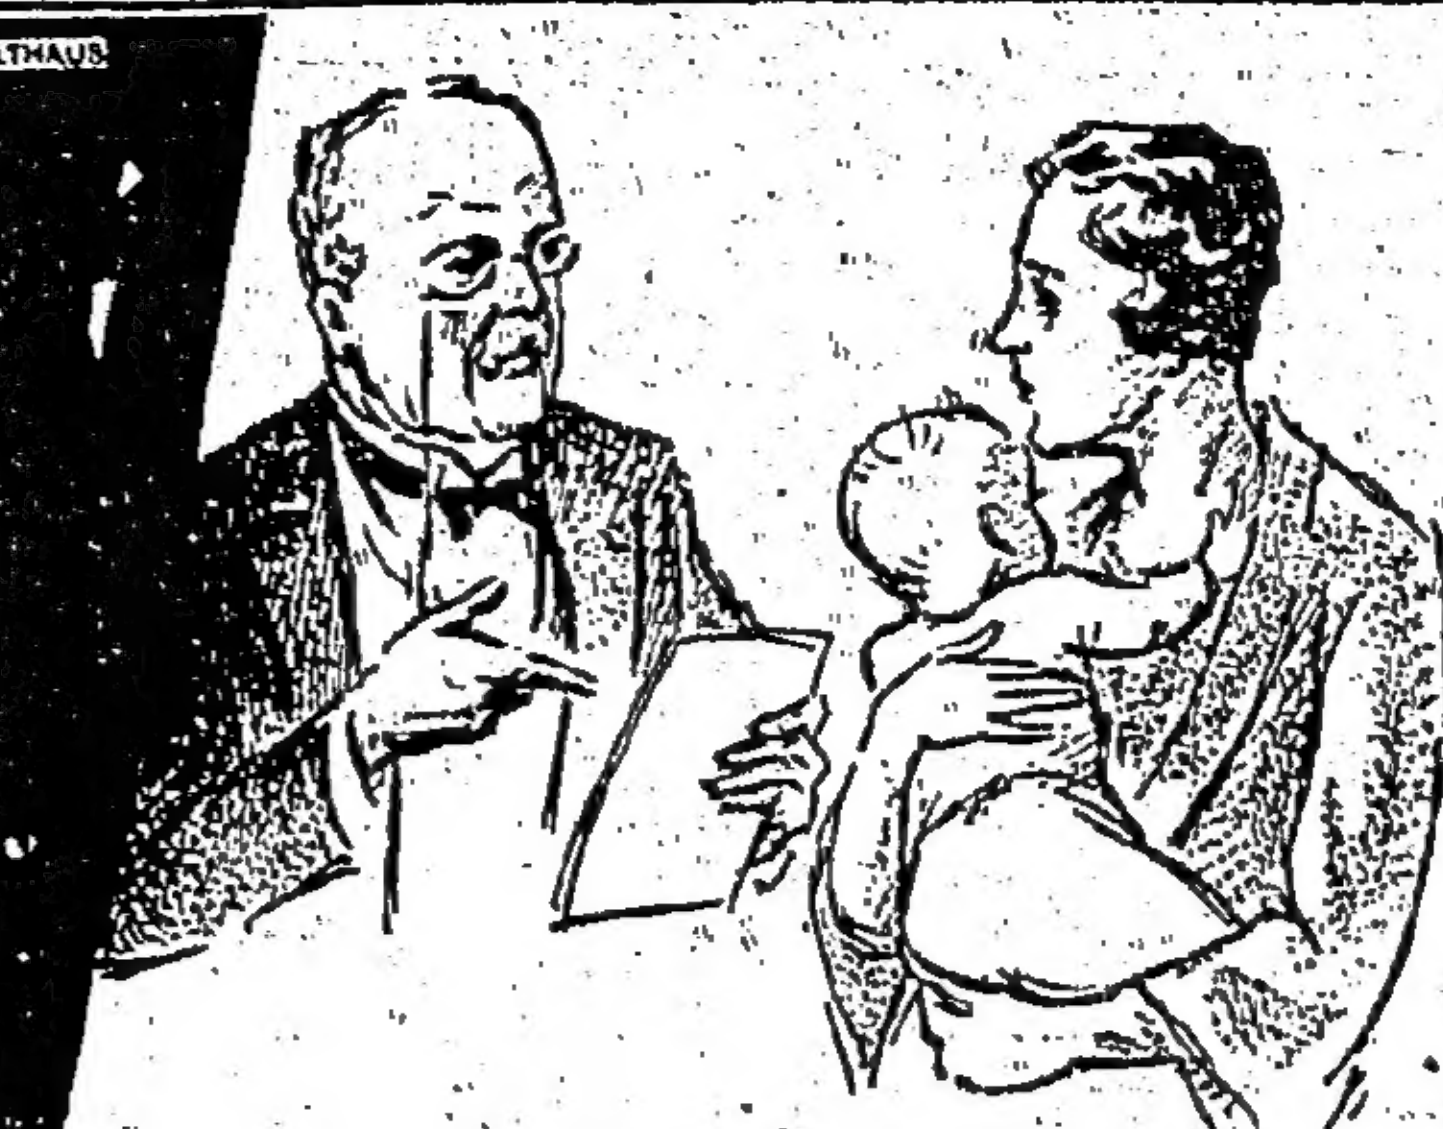

The declarer in this case must win the first trick with the queen of diamonds, enter dummy with a spade, return a club and take the finesse. Even if West does hold the king, South still holds the king and one diamond, which has the suit stopped with West in the lead, although it is not stopped if East were to get in the lead.

The original hand—with North holding the ace of clubs—also embodies another interesting hold-up.

Suppose that West opens the five of diamonds. East plays the jack. Declarer would hold off and play the seven. Now when East returns the nine of diamonds, South will play the queen and West can employ a pretty hold-up by refusing to win this trick.

The declarer will now finesse the club, East will win with the king and will return the six of diamonds. South must play his king, West will win with the ace and cash two good diamonds, in this manner defeating the declarer's contract.

In this case the declarer attempted to make the hand by employing the hold-up but West

RUBBER CONTROL SCHEME

NEW PLAN ADVANCED IN AMSTERDAM

Amsterdam, April 8.
A ten-year convention between rubber growers throughout the world, during which period no extension of planting areas will be allowed, is proposed in a scheme drafted by the prominent Amsterdam rubber-broker, Mr. Wynand, and explained by the President of the International Society of Rubber Culture of the Dutch East Indies.

The scheme proposes to establish an international committee with a Government delegate from each country, which will meet twice yearly to decide the figure of world consumption.

The total potential world production will be based on the future production of 1937 and a quota will be established for each country.

The annual world production will be based on world stocks, which will be considered equal to six months world consumption.—Reuter.
